(4/26-5/2) Looking for what to do in NYC during corona? There's more to do in the city now than there's been in months, including the reopening of many of the city's cultural destinations. Governor Cuomo has greenlighted New York City restaurants to reopen for indoor dining, expanded now to 50% capacity indoors. Read on for more in-person reopenings and other things to do in NYC this week!

A NEW CANTINA FOR THE BK

There are plenty of tlayuderia in L.A., but none in Brooklyn. That's set to change on Friday, April 30th when Tiny's Cantina opens in Prospect Heights. Mexican pizza here takes its cues from Puebla, like this bright chorizo version that tops a handmade corn tortilla with chorizo, black beans, radishes, pickled onions, crema, and queso. On the drinks side, look for a selection of craft mezcal and tequila that's 75 bottles strong.
