

5 New Things To Do & Eat In NYC Between May 3rd-May 10th

Check out these new restaurants, pop-ups, and specials all around NYC from May 3rd to May 10th.

Written by
Hannah Albertine

Updated May 4th, 2021

Warm weather is here, you don't have to buy chips with booze anymore, indoor dining will return at full capacity later this month, and there's a Yayoi Kusama exhibition at the New York Botanical Garden. But most importantly for our purposes today, a range of restaurants and chefs are hosting special events and pop-ups this week. That's why we're curating a weekly list of all the most intriguing stuff to eat and do around the city. Here's what's happening from May 3rd to May 10th in NYC.

© FOOD AND CITY

Tiny's Cantina

Last week the team behind Morgan's BBQ opened a central Mexican restaurant in Prospect Heights serving food like tlayudas and cemitas, as well as a bunch of mezcal- and tequila-based cocktails. This new restaurant is about a 10-minute bike ride away from the Brooklyn Botanic Gardens, which is hosting their last free spring weekend on Saturday, May 8th, and Sunday, May 9th. Reserve your tickets and check out the programming schedule here.