These NYC Restaurants Offer Beach-Like Relief Until Summer is Here

By Gabrielle Pedriani | February 24, 2017 | Food & Drink

The weather may be unseasonably warm but summer's still not here yet (and neither is spring!). To ameliorate your aching hearts, we've sought out a few select restaurants that will help you to bide your time until beach days are back again.

Industry Kitchen

If you gaze out of the expansive windows of the South Street Seaport's waterfront restaurant, Industry Kitchen, you can imagine—if only for a moment—that you're seated on the sand of an epic beach. Seafood, like grilled miso-marinated salmon, is sourced from The Lobster Place and served alongside signature pizzas handmade in the on-site, wood-burning oven. With over 300 indoor and outdoor seats, the industrially designed space is ideal for large groups seeking respite from the city streets. 70 South St., 212-487-9600
