

GUEST of a GUEST

The Best Restaurants For A Breakup In NYC

With Valentine's Day around the corner and all this talk about love, romance, and commitment permeating your social feeds and promotional email subject lines, it may have finally hit you: You're just not that into the person you've been dating. Not enough to want to shower them with heart-shaped chocolates and gushy greeting cards, at least. Harsh, but fair. Unfortunately, the window is quickly closing to cut ties with this person without being considered a complete jerk (doing it too close to V-Day), so it's time to make arrangements.

Industry Kitchen

If you're looking for just the right amount of privacy, book one of the outdoor dining cabins at Industry Kitchen. The menu is varied and affordable, you'll have an intimate private space to talk, and there's a calming waterfront scene to temper emotions.

Industry Kitchen, 70 South Street

