Trick-or-treat: Sweets and drinks

Skull pizza at Industry Kitchen

70 South St., industry-kitchen.com

Industry Kitchen's Chef Braulio Bunay has created a skull pizza with Halloween candies. The dessert pizza is made with pumpkin dough pizza crust that is topped with Nutella, marshmallows, snake gummies, and shaped with a caramel skull mold and hot red chocolate (for the blood). It is $21.

COURTESY STEAK & LONGER

celebrate Halloween with creepy cocktails, shocking shakes and "bloody" bakes at restaurants and bakeries across the city.

including one topped with screaming ghosts and another covered in "blood" that drips down its sides. They range in price from $38 to $45.

Spooky spiders at Kreuther Handcrafted Chocolate

43 W. 42nd St., kreuther-chocolate.com

Spiders may usually be creepy, but this one from Kreuther is both spooky and cute — made with T-bhibition vanilla marshmallow and speculans cookie, this bombon is covered in dark chocolate and topped with a sweet potato caramel head and chocolate eyeballs, $8/each. Its sold out mummy treat was made with salted butter caramel ganache, pretzel crunch, dark chocolate and eyeballs filled with passionfruit caramel.

Its bandages were made with white chocolate.

Whimsical Du's Donuts

107 N. 12th St., Williamsburg, customdots.com

Wylie Dufresne's gourmet cake doughnut shop is giving you the evil eye this Halloween. The vanilla cake doughnut is coated with a coconut glaze and topped with a gummy eye candy. There are also spiderweb donuts and pumpkin donuts for those who want to avoid the eye. $4/each, $24/pack of six.

Dipped treats Dylan's Candy Bar

1081 Third Ave., 33 Union Square West, and 231 Hudson St., dylanscandybar.com

The candy shop's new Halloween offerings include seas of Belgian chocolate-covered cake pops, pretzel rods, strawberries and Twinkies that have been decorated to look like ghosts, mummies and pumpkins.

Prices for the seas range from $35 to $50.

Halloween Cauldron at Virgil's Real BBQ

152 West 44th St., virgils-bbq.com

"This disturbingly fun drink features a frozen, "bloody" hand, gummy worms, candy spiders and candy bugs. The drink itself is made with any flavor Skyy Vodka mixed with 64 ounces of freshly made lemonade — enough for a group of six to enjoy. It is $54.

These Witches at North Fork

122 Christopher Street, northforknyc.com

This blood-colored cocktail at North Fork is served "smoking." It is made with vodka, lemon juice, blackberry syrup, muddled blackberries and dry ice for $12.
