Where To Eat During New York City Summer Restaurant Week

You know it's officially summer in New York when the Long Island Expressway is more crowded than the city's top restaurants. Restaurant Week, of course, is the antidote to potentially lifeless dining rooms. This biannual multi-week stretch of special set menus -- this season from July 23 through August 17 -- at hundreds of restaurants across the boroughs brings out the masses to dine on the cheap. Or at least, cheaper. For some of the best deals in town ($26 lunches, $42 dinners), reserve a table at one of these Restaurant Week celebrating hotspots.

Irvington

Both lunch and dinner will be served for Restaurant Week at this New American restaurant near Union Square. Course options will include asparagus gazpacho with Valencia orange jam, grilled Branzino with summer bean salad, corn risotto with blueberry and truffle popcorn as well as red velvet ice cream sandwiches for dessert.
