Avalon got a major upgrade when this Italian eatery from the owners of O-Ku moved in last winter. Following a summer sojourn in the boot-shaped nation, Executive Chef Michael Perez returned with loads of inspiration, whipping up seasonal pizzas (try the Brussels sprouts with fontina, pecorino romano and apples), housemade pastas (the pappardelle is a dream) and dishes like half chicken, all roasted in a wood-burning oven in full view of the glittering, white-brick dining room. The Affogato de Colletta is divine anytime, but return weeknights for happy-hour specials or Sundays for a wine flight and light bites ($16). Clink!
