

An Argentine Restaurateur Makes His Live-Fire Debut in America

Plus, a Japanese-inflected pizza chain from Vietnam comes to Brooklyn — and more new restaurants

by Nadia Chaudhury, Tierney Plumb, and Bettina Makalintal

Updated Jul 15, 2026, 5:02 PM EDT

This is Eater's guide to all the new restaurants, bars, and cafes that have opened this week in July 2026. Throughout the month, we'll update the list weekly (see: June, May, April, March, February, January). When we've been to a place, we will then include a few openings on our heatmaps (Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, cocktail bars) to let you know the ones we like. If there's an opening in your neighborhood that we've missed, let us know at ny@eater.com.

July 15

And the rest...

Chelsea: Billed as an all-night, “modern Mexican social tequilera,” Casa Felix debuted on Monday, July 13, marking the latest NYC hospitality venture also from Merchants (Ophelia, Philippe Chow, Industry Kitchen, and Art Bar). Chef Rey Martinez and beverage director Steven Restrepo send out regional Mexican dishes meant for sharing and a collection of agave cocktails, respectively. The setup includes a lively main dining room, bar, lounge, and private entertaining areas. 190 Seventh Avenue, at West 21st Street

The pollo asado tacos at Casa Felix. Casa Felix