NAMES: TOBALÁ, PAPALOMETL, PAPALOME

Smaller agaves that take 8 to 16 years to mature and grow only to around 1.5 to 2.5 feet in diameter. A solitary species that thrives in rocky terrain; it is labor-intensive to harvest but is highly sought-after for making mezcal due to the fact that it produces sweet, nutty and buttery mezcals.

NAMES: LARGO, BARRIL, MADRECUIXE, CUIXE

Grows tall, almost tree-like; anywhere from 8 to 15 feet tall. It can take anywhere from 12 to 19 years to mature. Its height results in a lower sugar content than other agaves, so the stalk and the piña are used in production resulting in a tannic spirit with a spectrum of dark, tart, bitter, and earthy mezcals.

PECHUGA

Pechuga mezcals are harvest celebrations. Traditionally, these spirits are shared over holidays, births, deaths, baptisms, marriages, and quinceañeras. Pechuga means breast and refers to raw chicken breast that is hung over the still during production. The chicken breast cooks in the emanating vapors, adding to the spirit's final flavor to impart an extra layer of rich mouthfeel. Local fruits, herbs, spices, grains, and nuts are also added to the batch. The mezcal is redistilled a third time.

OTHER MEXICAN SPIRITS

BACANORA

Named after the city of Bacanora - these spirits are an agave derived liquor made in the northern Mexican state of Sonora. The distillation of bacanora was illegal in Mexico until 1992. Previously, use was very widespread, and the government deemed it a public health issue. In 2000, the government issued an origin denomination bill which set the qualifications for production and removed the ban. Bacanora can only be made from Agave angustifolia, sub species pacifica. The piñas are cooked in below ground ovens for two days, like mezcal but then they are cooled for two days before they are fermented for 6 to 12 days.
