

On the water's edge

Weather controlled “Glasshouses” allow for private outdoor dining at the Watermark Bar in Manhattan.

Erik Pendzich/Shutterstock

Watermark Bar on Pier 15 in Lower Manhattan has created a series of sparkling white and blue “Glasshouses” that overlook the East River and offer diners a private and weather-proof spot for a night out.

The heated houses can fit as many as 10 guests who have the option of a la carte menu items, bottomless cocktails or a chef’s tasting, which includes crispy coconut shrimp, chips and guacamole, dessert crepes and a free bottle of champagne.

Diners looking for a few snacks while enjoying the views can munch on s’mores, meat skewers and chili.

Special events are held at the glasshouses each Wednesday — tickets can be purchased on EventBrite.