NYC's most beautiful places to get married

Looking for a lovely wedding venue in NYC? Start here

Summer is fast approaching, which means wedding season is nearly upon us. (Oh, who are we kidding—is it ever not wedding season?)

And while folks looking to get married in the five boroughs this year likely have only a few options—and hey, a City Hall wedding is one of the most delightful experiences you can have as a New Yorker—it doesn't hurt to plan ahead. Or maybe you just like gawking at beautiful wedding venues; that's cool too.

Here, we've gathered some of the most beautiful spots in New York City where you can have a wedding, from lush gardens to industrial-chic raw spaces, and everything in between.

The Campbell

15 Vanderbilt Ave
New York, NY 10017(212) 297-1781

What was once known as the Campbell Apartment is now simply the Campbell, a bar and event space located within Grand Central Terminal. The circa-1923 space once served as a private office and reception hall. Many of its historic details remain, and there are now three separate rooms where events can be held—including the stunning bar, adorned with a high coffered ceiling, a fireplace, and an enormous leaded glass window.
