NYC rooftop bars and restaurants to visit now

Summer doesn't last all year, but that's no reason to retreat from the city's best rooftops.

The same places that can be so breezy in the summer can be quite cozy in the colder months -- whether you're channeling your summer self with a tiki drink or holding a hot toddy and taking in the winter view through a floor-to-ceiling window.

Enjoy, and don't forget to take a sky-high selfie.

The Roof at Viceroy Central Park

If you're looking for some classy views, head to 57th Street -- where this indoor-outdoor hotspot is open year-round. The Roof at the Viceroy New York hotel has masterful views of Central Park and lots of comfortable seating. Sip classic and trendy cocktails -- the frozen Mexican hot chocolate is a good one for this time of year -- and nosh on small bites. 120 W. 57th St., theroofny.com
