

MR .
PUR
PLE

June 1, 2017

NEW YORK CITY
MONTHLY
JUNE 2017

The Sundeck
Gansevoort Park Avenue

Mr. Purple
Hotel Indigo

On those clear June days that feel perfect for the beach, it's the closest thing to sand and surf in Midtown

Most of the Lower East Side's going-out spots take after the area's name and are situated at low levels. Hotel Indigo, however, defies this norm with its 15th-floor rooftop bar Mr. Purple, which checks all the boxes of a this-day-and-age bar: filament bulbs, indoor plant life, craft beer, and a cocktail menu split between classic drinks and specialty house creations.

The signature Mr. Purple, for one, is a tequila-based apple and cranberry punch accented by allspice dram. Two balconies offer a swimming pool and plenty of room for fresh-air seating, and the fact that this is an outlier among its surrounds means the views stretch far and wide. (180 Orchard St.)

The Gansevoort Park Avenue has always been a favorite spot for summer fun-days, with its afternoon parties and three-level rooftop. The top of the three is The Sundeck, which, instead of being an expected sky-high club, is instead fashioned after a chilled-out beach bar, with cabanas to lie in, others of spiked lemonade to pour, and life-size blocks of foam to challenge other guests to play

Nearly for the Fr by a dolla with rum watering June day closest th Park Ave. Set at Sedgo views of handsome two floors bohemian outfitted blown-gl across to It's the Most of the Lower East Side's going-out spots take after the area's name and are situated at low levels. Hotel Indigo, however, defies this norm with its 15th-floor rooftop bar Mr. Purple, which checks all the boxes of a this-day-and-age bar: filament bulbs, indoor plant life, craft beer, and a cocktail menu split between classic drinks and specialty house creations.

The signature Mr. Purple, for one, is a tequila-based apple and cranberry punch accented by allspice dram. Two balconies offer a swimming pool and plenty of room for fresh-air seating, and the fact that this is an outlier among its surrounds means the views stretch far and wide. (180 Orchard St.)

snap-happy—everywhere you turn here looks like a picture, especially during sunset happy hour or even a selection of fine sakes. Drink up, because this dance floor doesn't stay quiet for long. (8-08 South, Long Island City)

Anyone who loves house and big-in-Berlin-style music knows that Williamsburg's Output is the club for them, though oftentimes it requires a wait due to its limited capacity. However, when the weather warms, it opens up its roof to make room for more dancers, particularly on its Sundays on the Roof parties, which are marked on every city's summer calendar.

The Funktion-One Sound System can feel all the more groovy, and in hot spots in the city, this place attracts a crowd devoted to the music and people watching. Don your dancing gear and your inhibitions at home. The beer help too. (74 Wythe Ave.)

Written by Gabrielle Lipton

