

July 12, 2017

am NEWYORK

NYC Restaurant Week: Where to get the best deals

Start making your Restaurant Week reservations.

It's almost time again for that nearly month-long promotion featuring three-course lunches ($29) and three-course dinners ($42) at some of the city's best restaurants — 390 of them, to be exact— spanning 34 types of cuisines and 42 neighborhoods, according to NYC & Co., New York's tourism marketing arm. Dining deals launch on July 24 and last through Aug. 18.

As usual, restaurants aren't offering their prix fixe menus on Saturdays, and some choose not to participate on Sundays, either. You can find links to menus and the restaurants involved here, but check out our picks for some of the most enticing deals below.

Kingside

Dinner from Monday through Friday and on Sundays at The Kingside -- a unique take on New American cuisine, presented in a subway tile-line space on the first floor of Midtown's Viceroy hotel -- will feature three picks per course. Starters include cauliflower croquettes, entrées beer-battered haddock with green olive tartar sauce and a 'Kale and Endive' salad with shaved pear, pecorino, and mint (pictured). For dessert, we're excited about the caramel pudding with chantilly cream and popcorn. 124 W. 57th St., Midtown, kingside-restaurant.com