

A Fish Called Avalon Restaurant wins award for best Key Lime Pie in America

Author: Pascal Pinault

Pies are, without a doubt, one of America's most beloved and iconic dessert. The saying "as American as apple pie" exists for a reason. There's a feeling of nostalgia and comfort in every bite, not to mention a strong sense of place.

MIAMI – A Fish Called Avalon officially serves up the best Key Lime Pie in America.

That's according to the American Pie Council. The local restaurant competed in the 25th annual National Pie Championships earlier this month and took home the award for best Key Lime Pie.

The restaurant entered their Key Lime Pie in the competition's Independent Division. The competition was stiff with 470 entries.

The American Pie Council recognizes the country's top commercial pies and is open to amateur pie makers, professional bakers and commercial pie manufacturers throughout the country and Canada. The competition was held in Orlando, Florida on April 11 - 13, 2019.

"This award recognizes the creativity of our kitchen team. Our Key Lime Pie is light, tart and the perfect Miami dessert," said Chef Kal Adballa, executive chef de cuisine. "We are thankful to our restaurant team for all the hard work they do throughout the year. We'd also like to thank The American Pie Council for recognizing the great work of restaurants and bakeries across the country."
