10 Unforgettable Food Experiences to Give Dad for Father's Day

Common dad-isms include the phrases, "I'm not sleeping, I'm just resting my eyes," "Go ask your mother," and, when asked what he'd like for any holiday, "I don't need anything." While he may not need anything for Father's Day, every dad can enjoy a memorable food experience—plus, you can share it. No matter your price point or location, you can find super-fun classes, tastings and tours to give the food-obsessed father.

From a practical knife skills tutorial to an over-the-top pasta-making class in Italy, these activities-as-gifts are unique ways to celebrate the most selfless man in your life, all while eating and drinking. —Regan Stephens

Pizza Party

Restaurants like New York City's Speedy Romeo offer that rare combination of excellent food in a laid-back (read: family-friendly) setting. Come for the "Fight for Your Right to Pizza Party" Father's Day brunch or dinner, which includes their signature wood-fired pizzas, wings, unlimited Prosecco and pitchers of beer, large-format mocktails for the kids and fun desserts like the sparkler-bedecked "Banana Split Sundae Extravaganza." ($25 for kids, $50 for adults, speedyromeo.com)
