

EATER

French Brasserie Debuts With Champagne Room in the East Village – and More Openings

A weekly updated roundup of new restaurants in New York City

October 17

Upper East Side: Abraham Merchant, who's behind big, vibey restaurants like Philippe Chow, has opened a three-story restaurant called Ivy Lane, with American fare influenced by French and pan-Asian cuisines. Ivy Lane has a cocktail lounge on the first floor, a mid-level dining room with a fireplace and skylights, and a 52-seat dining room and a 22-seat private room on the third floor. 116 East 60th Street, between Park and Lexington avenues

