Fort Putnam was a Patriot Revolutionary War Fort named after Colonel Rufus Putnam. It was established in the spring of 1776 during the Revolutionary War as a star shaped fort with five guns, surrounded by wide ditches and garrisoned by up to 5 companies. It was captured by the British in 1776 during the Battle of Long Island (27-29 Aug) and returned to American control when the British departed New York and abandoned it as a fortification in 1783, at the end of the war.

Fort Putnam was one of the main objectives of the British in the Battle of Long Island. They outflanked and overpowered the American troops. George Washington was able to evacuate the remaining Patriot troops across the river to Manhattan, saving the Continental Army. The British remained in control of Brooklyn and Manhattan until they evacuated the city in 1783. The British erected a square-shaped fort on the site in 1782 but it was re-established as Fort Greene during the War of 1812.

Now the site at Fort Greene Park contains a large central monument to the Revolutionary War Patriot prison ship martyrs. The British had held thousands of captured Patriots on prison ships anchored in the East River. Over 11,500 Patriot men and women died aboard these ships. Their bodies were hastily buried along the shore and later buried in a tomb on Jackson St. in Brooklyn. With the establishment of Fort Greene Park, a monument and a crypt for the remains of the prison ship martyrs was built and their remains were transferred there. Putnam's Pub is dedicated to the memory of those brave souls who fought heroically and died in the name of justice and, freedom from tyranny and oppression.
