DEAD LOW is the minimum depth a river is navigable. It’s whatever your boat needs to float.

For a canoe, Dead Low is 8 inches. For a paddlewheel steamboat, Dead Low is 12 feet or 2 fathoms. Steamboat River Pilots would navigate The Mighty Ohio in partnership with their Leadsman who marked the depth by casting out the Lead Line - a lead sinker weight tied to a rope marked with ribbons which were counted as the Lead Line was retrieved. The Leadsman would sing aloud the depth as a song so the crew could hear the mark & adjust course. Communities along the river often learned to identify steamboats by the song of their Leadsman.

Navigating Dead Low is a story of life. Of charting uncertain and often challenging waters. Of protecting your crew. Of safely delivering goods and services to the communities you meet along the way. We’re grateful you have found Dead Low Brewing & look forward to sharing more stories with you!
